FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

WELCOME TO THE NEIGHBORHOOD
Bothell's Retirement Village Gets a New Kind of Retirement Community

On Wednesday, August 15, in a town that boasts over half a dozen different retirement communities together known affectionately as Bothell's "Senior Enclave," Mark Lamb presided over the groundbreaking ceremony for a new retirement community—but this one is the first of its kind in the growing retirement village that has nestled itself around the renown Northshore Senior Center.

Chateau St. Laurent has the distinction of being the very first refundable entry fee community being built inside the Bothell city limits. Scheduled to open in late 2008, construction is now underway for an expansion of 71 luxury apartment homes on the campus of the successful, five-year old Chateau at Bothell Landing.

Ceremonial shovel in hand, Mayor Lamb said, "The City of Bothell is pleased to partner with respected retirement housing developers and operators like Chateau Retirement Communities in order to provide a wide variety of quality living options for seniors."

Company owner and CEO Jim Godfrey thanked Mayor Lamb for the spirit of hospitality and welcome consistently shown by the city to its seniors and the businesses that serve them. In talking about why his company decided to develop Chateau St. Laurent as a refundable entry fee retirement community, he observed that,

“With a guaranteed 100% refundable entry-fee, residents enjoy lower monthly service fees and need never worry about the rent going up.”

He added, “This is a win-win for everybody in that it that enables us to build a world class, service and amenities-rich retirement community that ultimately puts money back in the hands of our residents and their families.”

Chateau Retirement Communities has been locally and family owned and operated for over twenty years. Chateau residents are inspired to “Live Life on Your Terms” by the company’s wide array of service options that support and encourage independence.
